vigil candles information

Many will have noticed by now the smaller “jarred” candles on the vigil stand as well as in the sacristy cabinet for home use. They are still 5 day candles, like the previous ones, but the company providing them now uses a compressed wax method that removes a lot of the air in the regular candle. It should be the same amount of “burn time” with a shorter, slightly thicker candle. At present they are still available for an offering of $2, but with rising fuel costs for delivery, it is quite possible the price will increase in the future.

The Catholic Daughters are busy with their homemade tamale preparations. Contact any of them if you are interested in purchasing their goodies. This is their one major fundraising effort to support their charitable work in the parish and the community.

a little housekeeping....

As is quite normal, most families prefer to schedule Masses for loved ones on weekends when they are free from work and more members of the family can attend together. One issue has arisen during these last two months that needs to be addressed. Masses will not be scheduled over the phone any longer. Nor will dates be scheduled after Sunday Mass as it is difficult to know if a date is available when the calendar is in the office and the priest is standing with you in the Church. This must be done in person at the office, in advance of the date desired. Simply call ahead to assure I will be here so you do not make the trip and find the office closed. The offering for any Mass—weekday or Sunday—is $5. It should be given at the time of scheduling the Mass. There have been numerous examples during these last two months of individuals who have hounded the office for a specific date, called to check up on that date, and then never made the customary offering either beforehand or after the Mass. If a family cannot afford the offering, they should indicate this at the time of the scheduling.

november: remembering our beloved dead

We will again have our book of remembrance in the entrance of the Church for the month of November. This takes the place of the All Souls Day envelopes. You are welcome to write the names of your loved ones on the pages of the book and they will be remembered at Mass during the month of November, the month of the Holy Souls.
