October 14th,
St. Callistus I,
Pope and Martyr

In 217 Callistus, having been a slave, was ordained deacon to Pope Zephyrinus, and then succeeded him as Pope. Callistus systematized the first official Christian cemetery in Rome, on the Appian Way. There for a century the Popes were buried. Those catacombs are still known by the name of St. Callistus. He had to battle several heresies before martyrdom in 222. In 1960 his tomb was discovered in Rome.

October 15th,
St. Teresa of Avila,
Virgin and Doctor

Today's saint lived during the century of Spanish exploration of the New World. Born at Avila, Spain (1515). Teresa entered the Carmelites in 1535, made persistent progress in the way of perfection, had mystical revelations. Setting out on the reform of the Order, she endured many difficulties with unconquered spirit. Teresa composed works of the highest doctrines and mystical theology. She died at age 67 (1582) and was named a Doctor or Teacher of the Church in 1970.
